

CONF 695 – Post-Conflict Contexts: Between Global and Local Spring 2013

Instructor: Professor Leslie Dwyer
Email: ldwyer2@gmu.edu
Office: 616 Truland Building

Class Time: Thursdays, 7:20-10 p.m.
Class Location: Arlington Campus, Founders Hall 317
Class Prerequisites: CONF 501/801 or permission of instructor

Course Description:

This is a graduate course designed primarily for S-CAR Masters/Ph.D. students. Students should have already taken, or currently be enrolled in, CONF 501 or 801 prior to enrollment.

This course will examine the social worlds that emerge in the aftermath of violent conflict, paying special attention to issues of structural inequality, memory, narrative, gender, trauma, culture and identity. Together we will critically evaluate theories and practices of transitional justice, including retributive justice, reparations, truth-telling, reconciliation, memorialization and psychosocial repair. We will consider the forms of social change and governance that emerge out of post-conflict humanitarian practice, and explore the dynamic frictions that take place when globalizing models for post-conflict psychosocial and community repair engage with local realities. The focus in the course is international in scope, stressing the importance of attending to the translations (and mistranslations) that occur when post-conflict interventions are put into practice in diverse cultural and political settings. By the end of the semester, students should be familiar with broad themes in the transitional justice literature, and have honed a critical sensibility allowing them to think creatively about culturally and politically appropriate post-conflict programming.

This course is not a lecture course. Rather, it is an intensive graduate seminar designed to promote collaborative dialogue. Participants are expected to arrive in class having thoroughly read and reflected on the week's readings, prepared to actively engage in discussion. Over the course of the semester, each student will be responsible for facilitating one hour of class time.

Course Requirements and Evaluation:

Grading for the course will be determined as follows:

Participation: 10%
Class facilitation 15%
Short reading essays (5 total): 25%
Midterm report: 20%
Final report: 30%

Participation:

Your grade for participation will be based upon the quality and consistency of your contributions to our class discussions. Each week, you should be prepared not only to summarize what you have read and to discuss the authors' main points, but to provide a critical perspective on our texts and their relation to other social theories and to issues of conflict analysis and resolution, both broadly and in particular settings. The questions you should be asking yourself as you read for class include: What are the authors' main concerns? How are they framing key theoretical concepts? Are their arguments logically compelling? How can we relate their arguments to the field of conflict analysis and resolution? How might they help us to better understand particular post-conflict social landscapes? What might be left out of a particular analysis that it would be important to explore? A superlative evaluation for participation will require you to regularly contribute your ideas to our discussion, as well as to serve as a generous interlocutor for your seminar colleagues. In other words, it is not the quantity of your contributions but the quality that matters most, as well as your ability to raise issues that spark collaborative consideration, and to listen openly to others' perspectives.

Class Facilitation:

Pairs of students will be responsible for facilitating 1 hour of class time. We will schedule facilitation dates and pairs during the second week of class. Pairs may choose to approach this task creatively, by designing a role play, dialogue or other in-class activity but the facilitation design should draw upon the week's reading themes and help to extend our understanding of the topic under consideration that week. Facilitators are welcome to consult with me beforehand, and should email me the evening before their scheduled facilitation to outline what they are planning to do in order to help me time my own lesson plan.

Short Reading Essays:

Four short (approximately 2-4 double-spaced pages) reading review essays will be required over the course of the semester. These essays should critically analyze the readings assigned for the week in which they are being submitted, and discuss their potential relationship to the field of conflict analysis and/or resolution. Essays should briefly lay out the main concerns of the readings, considering their theoretical assumptions and claims. You should be thinking critically about the logic and perspective underlying the readings, as well as how they relate to other theories we are discussing and to our understanding of conflict and post-conflict dynamics more generally. You may choose which weeks you wish to submit essays. Please submit them by hard copy during the class when the particular readings are being discussed. These need not be polished pieces; feel free to use them as another space for dialogue with the instructor, and for raising critical questions, confusions, or concerns.

Midterm Report:

In order to gain a deeper familiarity with local post-conflict issues, each student will write a report (7-10 pages) providing an overview of a post-conflict social and political setting and the interventions that have been attempted there, drawing upon outside research. These should be in the form of “briefings” that attempt to convey the overall post-conflict situation. While you will need to think analytically about how to frame your own narrative of the conflict, and how to focus your description of the post-conflict practice context, these midterm reports are not meant to be full-fledged “evaluations” of what has been attempted but rather thoughtful, descriptive overviews. For the final report assignment, these midterm reports will be revised and expanded, adding a critical/evaluative component (see below). Midterm reports will be due via email by 5 p.m. on Friday, March 8.

Final Report:

A final report of 15-20 pages will be due at the conclusion of the semester, by 5 p.m. on THURSDAY, MAY 9, via email (please keep a copy in case of transmittal issues). This should be an expansion of the midterm report, adding a critical dimension that draws on our class readings and discussions. These reports should detail a particular post-conflict context and interventions, and provide a critical discussion of successes, failures, and future directions for programming. We will be discussing details and possibilities for this assignment in much greater detail in class.

Course Policies:

Late assignments or “incomplete” grades will be given only in cases of personal or family crisis. You MUST discuss the possibility of such arrangements with me beforehand rather than waiting until an assignment is due or past due. Failure to turn in an assignment on time without prior discussion will result in a failing grade for that particular assignment.

Given the importance of your active, thoughtful participation to the success of the class and your own S-CAR career, attendance at all course meetings is expected. If you must miss a class, please let me know beforehand by email. Missing more than one class over the course of the semester will inevitably result in a lowered “participation” grade.

All students should familiarize themselves with GMU’s Honor Code and the university guidelines for the proper use and citation of sources. Please ask me if you have questions. It is much better to ask prior to turning in an assignment, rather than waiting for a faculty member to notice something that should have been cited. I take the issue of plagiarism very seriously. Cases of suspected plagiarism will be referred for evaluation to GMU’s Honor Committee, which may recommend penalties of expulsion from the university for serious violations.

Readings will be posted on Blackboard. I will also be setting up a class Ning site on the S-CAR network (<http://network.scar.gmu.edu>) where announcements and discussions will be posted, so please make sure you are registered on the site. I will also be communicating with you outside of class by email. Please make sure your GMU email account is activated and that you check it regularly. Should you have questions, concerns or ideas you would like to discuss, feel free to make an appointment to meet in my office, or to communicate via email. We can also arrange phone conversations as needed to accommodate our respective schedules.
